Three Week Session (ages 10 – 19) Jun 5 – Jun 23

Description: Students spend quality time on the hot shop floor learning the basic concepts of designing and executing projects in hot glass. Additional studios such as metal sculpture and welding, flame working, a Bookbinding Boot Camp, Screen Printing, Block Printing, Animated Flip books, Engineered Pop Up books, and Architectural Float making, complement, copper enameling, and flame-working complement this ancient medium and students are encouraged to create multi-media projects.

One Week Session (ages 9 – 17) Jun 26 – Aug 11

Description: Students can sign up for one, two, three, or more weeks and not necessarily back to back. The same studios are offered from the three-week session with the exception of glassblowing.

Session Descriptions

Venetian Glassblowing & Sculpture (Three-Week Session available only) – This workshop is designed to enable students to incorporate glass designs into other forms of media, whether print, metal, animation, or other, culminating in multimedia final projects.

Glass Torching (with Morretti glass) – Torchworking is the process by which colored glass rod (or “cane”) is manipulated using heat from a single table-top torch, as seen frequently in chemistry labs. Students undergo a comprehensive introduction to creating exotic sea creatures learning, thereby, basic methods for manipulating small sculptures on steel rods (called “mandrels”), advancing brilliant and complex color patterns.

Stained Glass & Glass Mosaics – new students will learn basics of stained glass, including proper cutting, grinding, soldering, copper foiling and techniques. When equipped to prepare patterns using multicolored glass pieces, students will endeavor in creating a variety of unique, imagined designs, including brilliant stained glass window panels. Returning students will engage new challenges, including fabrication of increasingly complex, three-dimensional forms, as well as pattern-making in stained glass, along with glass mosaics, tabletops, sconces, lighted sculptures, and wall hangings.

Metal Sculpture & Welding – Young adults immerse into the art of metal engineering and creative design through welding. Such comprehends fabrication of armatures and sculpted structures using welding, cutting, bending, and the finishing of metal – utilizing principles of kinetics and motion. Students are encouraged to combine creations executed in glass and print into respective metal sculpture projects. As skill levels increase, students develop projects in the vein of wall hangings, outdoor metal sculpture, creative light fixtures, and glass/metal end tables.

Ceramic Sculpture – Using red earthenware clay, students will learn hand-building techniques to form whimsical sculptures. Contingent only on individual creativity and problem-solving, students conceive, execute, and fire their own works of art, which can be wall-mounted, or placed in a home, yard or garden.

Printmaking – includes bookmaking, screen printing, block printing, intaglio printing, animated flip-books, engineered pop-up books and Italian paper marbling. Traditional, flat-bed printing presses are used to generate one-of-a kind images on a diversity of paper, metal, and glass, while imparting knowledge of “relief” and “intaglio” printing methods. Additional image-making systems shall supplement traditional means, expanding educational scope. Students learn an array of techniques, including traditional bookmaking, woodblock carving, copper etching, letterpress printing, and Italian paper marbling – and how to incorporate each into their own individual projects.

Paper Engineering & Book Arts – Young adults combine printed images, along with creations from other studios, to execute three-dimensional communicative forms. The result is a one-of-a-kind, personalized hand-bound, pop-up book, encompassing printmaking and collage techniques. Faculty actively encourage students to follow personal creative visions; albeit, teachers, first impart requisite technical skills and vocational foundations in bookbinding, permitting construction of more advanced prototypes in paper making and engineering of pop-up books.

Paper Maché Sculpture – students learn basics for designing simple structures, and then how to build upon such knowledge by way of manipulating paper in pursuance of structural formations. Three-dimensional forms will emerge as students work towards sculpting life-size forms, to be completed by the end of each student's session and available for taking home.

Animated Filmmaking (Mixed Media) – Using smartphones, students synthesize tools, materials, and skill-sets acquired through printmaking to develop short animated films. Young adults will collaborate in effecting a narrative abstracted from sequential images, combining printed backgrounds with free-standing paper maché figures, props, and sets—culminating into an edited, animated film. Students take away technical skills and aesthetic concepts necessary for realizing a completed project, contemplating phases from story-boarding, to production, to post-production. What films our young adults create will be optimally formatted for sharing across devices, rendering mementos of summer adventures in filmmaking.

Kinetic Sculpture (Mixed Media) – Mobiles and kinetic art incorporate movement into the art of sculpture. Young adults will design and integrate printmaking into moving sculptures. Kinetic sculptures will be abstracted from template forms, and completed through a synergy balancing diverse media and technical skill-sets acquired through work with in areas of glass, print, and metal.
